Voters want a major overhaul of healthcare in America

Healthcare is one of the top issues voters want President-elect Trump to focus on in his first year in office. Making prescription drugs more affordable is the number one policy priority while the replacement of the Affordable Care Act is completely on the table.

84% Believe healthcare is an important issue for President-elect Trump to focus on in his first year in office.

88% Making prescription drugs affordable is a priority across all generational divides.

83% 88% 90% 97%

83% Believe the number 1 policy priority for President-elect Trump is to make prescription drugs more affordable so Americans don’t have to choose between putting food on the table and their health.

Millenials Generation X Baby Boomers Greatest Generation

69% 72% 78%

69% Support for highly amending ACA crosses party affiliation, including among Democrats who would rather see ACA highly amended than all out repealed.

Democrats Independents Republicans

73% Prioritize highly amending ACA and keep what is working, like preventing insurance companies from denying people with pre-existing conditions.

Democrats Independents Republicans

Data shown is from a survey conducted by FTI Consulting among N=1,000 2016 voters. For questions about the survey, please contact Bill Cullo at Bill.Cullo@FTIConsulting.com